*Be Careful
What You
Wish For*

(You Might Just Get It!)

Once upon a time, there was a “Little Engine That Could”
company that had big heart, big hopes, and big dreams.

The people of this company truly believed in themselves and in their mission, so they wished as hard as they worked.

And they wished for three things:

*Be Careful
What You
Wish For*

(You Might Just Get It!)

To be the biggest and best provider of specialized education services in the country

To branch out into lots of states — to become a truly nationwide organization

To expand our service line beyond special education, into alternative education, to reach as many students as possible

(You Might Just Get It!)

These are lofty goals, no doubt — to not just be the best provider in the country, with the largest reach and the deepest impact, but to bring our mission and our model to all types of at-risk students, not just special ed the way we started out.

And you know what?
